GIRLS! GIRLS! SURELY TRY THIS! DOUBLES BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

All you need is a 25-cent bottle of "Danderine"—Hair gets lustrous, fluffy and abundant at once.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits, particularly those who have been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use of Danderine, when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes, but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Ribbons were never so striking as this season. Velvet ribbons with raised figures on satin grounds are among the most beautiful. The new moire ribbons are adorned with gold cord.

WOMEN TO READERS

Latest American Fashions

BY CORA MOORE.

Broadcloth, ousted two or three seasons ago by other worsteds and an enthusiasm for silks and velvets, has been reinstated, and is again being used in some of the most attractive costumes—not only suits, but dresses.

In the model sketched is illustrated a panther frock fashioned of this material in ivory white, for any woman of any pretensions to smart garbing contrives to include at least one white costume of seasonal value in her wardrobe the year around, and, next to black velvet, white broadcloth has more aristocracy about it than any other material.

Here the skirt, long, of course, is made with rather more than the usual amount of fulness, and has the back extended to a fair-sized train. The panthers are particularly graceful. The folds are arranged in such a manner that they inclose the hips, thereby following their lines rather than emphasizing their size.

In this particular the model is excellently suited for a stout figure as well as for a slender one. The few gathers required at the top are slipped toward the front and back, with only a stray two or three left over the hips. The bodice has the top and sleeves of shadow lace of the precise tint of the broadcloth with shoulder sleeves cut in one piece with the sides, forming a square cut neck. A square plastron of the broadcloth rises from the girdle, meeting a similar section from the back in under the arm seams and decorated, as are the broad-cloth sections, through the centers of the sleeves with coral velvet-colored buttons.

It will be noticed that there is a wrinkling of the broadcloth at the sides under the arms. This is as it should be, for if it should happen that the folds do not fall properly into place or bulge out too far, the fault is easily remedied by catching one or two of them down. The belt and bows, of the one of the felt and on the skirt, are of coral velvet like the buttons.

White broadcloth, in indeed any fabric of its weight, should always be made up after a design that presents as much uninterrupted surface as possible, because of its own inherent richness, and the greatest care should be taken to have all edges and especially hems given a tailored finish. The rule applies with equal force when the hem is to be treated to a heading of any sort. Pippings and folds are not pressed, but must be perfectly made.

WHITE BROADCLOTH IS EXTREMELY MODISH THIS FALL FOR GOWNS AS WELL AS SUITS.

and folded before attempting to apply them to an edge. Similarly, perhaps more than with any of the other fabrics, any irregularity in machine stitching upon broadcloths obtrudes itself upon the eye.

AUCTION BRIDGE

By R. F. Foster.

Many players at third hand bid upon their own cards without taking sufficient into consideration the opening bid made by the dealer, which should be the key to the situation. When the dealer makes a winning declaration, the third hand has a chance to go game—it is the duty of the third hand to support him if he can, or to warn him if he cannot assist him.

But when the dealer passes, bidding one spade, it is left to the third hand to take the initiative in making a winning declaration, and this some players are rather too ready to do. Probably three times out of four the bids made by the third hand after the dealer has started with a spade are unsound.

Third hand can warn the dealer that he has no support for the dealer's suit, and the dealer can warn the third hand that there will be no support for his suit. The dealer's warning, being given in advance of the declaration by third hand, is much the more valuable of the two. The reason for this is that the dealer's declaration is already made and the responsibility assumed before the third hand can warn him of his danger.

Third hand points in penalties might be saved by players who are called upon to bid third hand if they would only make sufficient allowance for the possible weakness in the hand of a partner who starts out with a call of one spade. Here is an example:

Deal and bids a spade, which A passed, not having stoppers enough in spades to declare. This is a bad bid, because if Z has not two tricks in his hand there is not the slightest chance to go game in hearts, nor is there much danger of the other side going game in anything. Y should have let them declare.

Y's cards are quite good enough to call a heart upon as dealer, but not after his partner has told him that there is no support for his suit. If he does so, if that, to help him. The dealer hopes for an average hand to assist him. The third hand has told whether the hand is below average or not. There is no hope about it.

B would have bid a diamond if the spade had been left alone, and whether it was left at a diamond or shifted to another suit, the result would be the same. It would go game. As it was, B passed the heart and the contract was set for three tricks.

his breath and disclosing his hand for nothing.

The plain lace edge is very strong and a great improvement over the frill in recent years. It is much easier to launder and it wears better.

The scrim curtains are very inexpensive, bought ready for hanging, but if one has the time to make them at home a better quality can be had at the price of the ready-made kind of scrim.

The colored madras curtains are still favored for dining rooms and libraries, but when these rooms are dark the heavy net curtains, lightly applied with a broad or ribbon, are substituted.

Those who are loyal to the lace curtains will find most beautiful effects in the inexpensive Nottingham lace curtains. It is almost unbelievable that some of the limitations are not the real thing, so beautiful are they in design and finish. Only a few years ago Nottingham lace curtains were regarded as the most common coarse kind of draperies. Today many of them are perfectly exquisite.

Printed actin still holds its own as a popular drapery.

The newest designs are all conventional in design and what looks to be just white cotton voile, barred with a coarse thread forming rather large squares.

For bedrooms the latter material is very pretty and practical, because it makes a better screen than the plain surface, and it is almost invisible when the room is lit. A wide hem on sides and bottom, edged with a torchon or cluny lace, is all that is necessary for good effect. Plain fabrics require more elaborate decoration.

The sale for heavy draperies, I am told, does less every year.

People regard them as unhygienic and dispense with them as much as possible, preferring only washable hangings. Crestones and English clintons, lined and unlined, are taking the place of the old-time woolen and silken damasks.

Hats for Autumn Wear.

On the whole, the autumn hats do not promise to be very interesting. They are a little somber and very heavy in effect, masses of folded velvet and silk extending upward and backward on a comparatively narrow shape. One would suppose to look at many women, that they never used a hand glass or thought of examining the effect of their hats from any save a front view. Yet, particularly to those who possess a good profile, the side view is quite as important.

The picture hat is never out of fashion; it only alters its details. This year we are back to soft, furry felts with wavy brims; to velvet and satin, of course, and even to old-world brocade. Future brocade is used with great effect for some picture hats, which can be trimmed with a feather of the weeping kind or a single sable skin.

An inch-wide facing of contrasting tone is often very becoming and striking, a broad brim having a band of black on the inside, if it be white, in the same border as the hat itself. Velvet can be used for this purpose on hats of straw, velvet, satin, silk or felt. White on black is effective, but should be used with care. There are many kinds of combinations that cannot bear a sudden line of white or a mass of it.

In nearly every case when a Turkish border is used it finishes in a fantasy woven in the fabric rarely with a straight edge. Other materials show bars of contrasting color or embroidery graduated in width and running round a deep band.

The bits of certain insects and the stage of others are really tiny punctured wounds, through which a poison is introduced into the blood.

This latter circumstance accounts for the inflammation, which is generally quite out of proportion to the size of the wound, and in certain irritable constitutions, or those of peculiar sensibility, requires constitutional treatment.

To paint the spot with liquid ammonia is perhaps the most effective remedy for the bite of a gnat or a mosquito. The bites of these insects frequently produce a bump. This bump and the irritation it causes somewhat resemble the bites of a wasp or a bee.

For evening coats, light-colored velvet, plushes, brocades, chambruses and broadcloths are used. Most of these wraps have sleeves cut in one with the body of the coat, they are cut in with extremely large armholes. Some take the form of a cape. The idea in all cases is that they can be slipped on easily.

Some of the new blouses have shoulder straps. These extensions are generally of the same material as the bodice and are fastened over the back or under the arms. They are effectively trimmed with buttons.

"REALLY DOES" PUT STOMACHS IN ORDER AT ONCE—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

Time it! In just five minutes there will be no Indigestion, Sourness, Heartburn, Gas or Dyspepsia.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. and Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Diapepsin comes in contact with your stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructation of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how good it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

irritation and discomfort is to apply vinegar, alcohol or ammonia to the spot; also a solution of soda is sometimes effective in children's cases. A weak solution of borax and in very good, and peroxide of hydrogen is also splendid.
